Activity in the JIN Program Office

Activities this week centered on finalizing a Homeland Security Grant Proposal and on preparations for Tuesday's Board meeting.

Summary Offender Profile

Steve Clem and I will demonstrate the SOP application at the upcoming Board Meeting. Otherwise, there is not much to report, except that the application was down briefly on Thursday; only one Thurston County user has signed on; and I'm still unable to obtain Driver Information.

Additionally, I added some hours to the contract with Milestone Technology that will allow us to complete the pilot assessment next month.

JIN Proof of Concept

The second JIN proof of concept—which will exchange information related to a Failure to Appear among Seattle Municipal Court, the Department of Licensing and the Administrative Office of the Courts—achieved connectivity between AOC and DOL on Thursday after two days of on-site work. A full report and some type of demonstration are scheduled for the next Board meeting.

Miscellaneous

? I met several times with Bill Forth of DOL to refine a grant application to automate certain aspects of the firearms licensing process. We presented our proposal to Fred Stephens and then later to Deputy Chief Paul Beckley, and I am hopeful that, as they did, the Board will express its support for the effort.

? I spent some time with Heather Anderson and Patti Jensen of the WSP's Criminal Records Division to learn more about ACCESS training and the collection of fingerprints. I am grateful to all at CRD for their time, and especially to Mary Neff and Toni Korneder for setting this up.

? I met separately with David Neufeld (Online) and Alain Dias (Equarius) to discuss the proof of concept projects and their implications for long-term JIN planning. I also visited the DOL to view Online's attempt to set up connections with AOC.

? I briefed Mike Mcvicker, the new DIS director, on JIN issues.

? I discussed the future of Summary Offender Profile with Templar, the developer. It appears that modifications to the system can be achieved by persons other than Templar, but not without some difficulty, and their cooperation. We will discuss this and other issues related to the future of the application next month with the Technical Advisory Group and the Board.
